Run# 889 – May 26th 2016

Hare: Precum Princess

Location: Oriole Park Outdoor Gym

Prelube: Mr Mikes

On On: LBG's

Scribe: G-Spot

Since I have the great pleasure of scribing I like to take the opportunity to rant for a moment or two or three. This time it is about scribes and scribing. I watched this week when it was time for the task of appointing the scribe. Hashers start to squirm, avoiding eye contact with the RA and hare, and finally some tried to divert attention away from themselves by saying things such as "let's appoint the last who got here." On that note I do have to say punishing the latecomer by making them scribe happens so often enough that as we were heading to the run late this week, Premie suggested that maybe we should show up even later ensuring that we arrived after the scribe was designated. He's not just a pretty face who leads the pack in a rousing rendition of Dead Whore.

It appears that scribing is seen by RDHHH as a punishment. A punishment that lately has seen a bit of rebellious behavior. There was more than one hasher who in the past month did not submit their run report. Not mentioning any names Curb Crawler and Paul (but more about you later Paul.) Perhaps it is time to rethink this "punishment approach" to scribing.

Speaking of negative approaches to scribing, I once worked tirelessly for 7 days on a brilliant scribe only to be told by Mobey's Dick when I submitted it that I would not be eligible to receive my free run for scribing because it was submitted late (by two days.) I ask you all...If scribing is such a painful ordeal for most hashers, why are we continuing to require a scribe for every run? Maybe it should be optional... just saying. If you want to know what happens on the run then maybe you should get your sorry ass to the circle find out first hand.

Here's another idea – maybe we should try to radically change the culture of scribing and make it an honor saved for a selected few. We could allow only certain talented and distinguished hashers to take on this important task that can't be trusted to the rest of the no minds in the pack. Maybe only scholarly egg head hashers like Mobey's (who should have some extra brain cells in that big head of his) would be trusted to scribe. Or Ms Daisy who has hashed so long she is full of hash wisdom and if all else fails she could recycle previous winning scribes and most of us would be none the wiser. Or for Wee Little Bladder it could serve as a springboard for his NoBees career. Only famous musicians could have the honor of scribing at our hash. We could add Pleasure Chest to give her another outlet to influence the hash. Scribing can be very influential. Or we could include Chips who once circulated a "Scribe template." WTF. No let's not include him in this elite group. Let's make him earn his way in. He could write a few scribes on spec and if they were deemed worthy he could be included. Yes pack I think it is time to rethink our practices for scribing – what we are doing is not working.

End of rant which for the record was longer than most of this year's scribes.

OK now for the run report ...

May 26 in Red Deer and yes it was raining outside. I was nicely snuggled into the couch planning an evening of laying around when Preemie announces that we "have to go to the run" because Nookey was driving down and he needs someone to keep him company on the "hash drive along". Knowing that might not be enough of a reason to get me off the couch he reminded me that Precum was the hare and I was off the couch and into my runners in a heartbeat. We both know I think Precum sets some of the best runs in the Red Deer Hash. We headed out but were very late leaving Sylvan Lake. That's never good.

The pack was gathered in Oriole Park and as I slipped into the circle late I recalled the last time I was here for a RDHHH run a few years back. I had arrived late for that run as well but I found the pack by following the "on on" noises (those were the good ole days when the pack used to loudly call "on on" so everyone for miles around knew the direction they were running of the run. Most FRB in those days carried whistles to make even more noise.) I was a good 10 minutes behind it the pack (somethings never change) and as I scrambled down the rock to the river I could see the pack had already crossed the water (must have been a Wee Little Bladder run as there was a good river crossing.) The pack already on trail on the other side of the water watched as I attempted to cross water up to my armpits. Kill Kenny took pity on me and came back across the river to help rescue me. Yes those were the good old days when FRBs looked out for the slower back of the pack hashers but I digress...

Back to May 2016. We were gathered for Precum's run. She enthusiastically gave us the markings and we were off. As we started running down a paved trail I smelled a long false trail. Indeed it was long - nice job Precum but it could have been another mile or two or five. Don't you be soft on those FRBs as they like it hard and long? Good thing you already have a hash name.

We ventured back near the start to head off in another direction. (Head, I'll have some of that...)

On trail we came across false trails after false trail. Good job Precum. I've heard that FRBs are partial to false trails. It gives them lots of exercise for their svelte figures. We don't want a bunch of chubby FRBs.

At one point in the run the FRBs headed up a long steep hill. Atta girl Precum - don't let them tell you that they don't like that stuff. The steeper the hill the better. It gives the FRBS a chance to practice their heavy breathing and they like that.

I watched as Precum headed down the false trails herself to encourage Mobeys, Ambi and Curl Crawler to go that route and when they were far enough ahead she turned back as they ran back toward the real trail. Good job Precum. You nailed it.

At the hashhold I had the pleasure of talking with Paul. Now Paul really needs a hash name. I understand he's been hashing since run 800 and we are at 899. WTF. Is our RA sleeping or has he lost his creative juices? Chip's term as RA is almost over so maybe he is a bit dried up. Paul was telling us he is headed over to Europe to hash. If he doesn't have hash name before he leaves he certainly cum home with one (a hash name I mean although he may cum home with other things too but that's for a different scribe.) Hashing with all those dykes in Amsterdam hmmm I'm sure there will be hash name there. Paul was telling me that he could not decide whether to hash in Munich or celebrate Oktoberfest. Paul I'm here to tell you they are not mutually exclusive events. Get out your lederhosen, grab a beer, and hash in Germany. It will be the best Oktoberfest experience in the country. I understand Paul was looking for something "wet and slippery" on trail but all he found was worms. Maybe he will find some more attractive "wet and slippery" in Europe. Paul carried the hash Shit throughout the run (unlike some Wee Little Bladders who hide it in their cars seconds after they get it) and very proudly told Cumsee and I that he was "full of Shit on the run." Paul maybe best not to mention that in your quest for "wet and slippery" in Europe. Just trying to help you out buddy. And don't wear any hats in the circle in Europe or you probably won't want to bring them home. They aren't the same kinder and gentler hashers over in Europe that you've experienced at RDHHH.

Enough about Paul... (Although he is a great subject to write about.)

At the down down circle were some punishments. Our RA discovered that if you want harriette to strip in the circle just bring out the sleeve. You don't have to use it for punishments - just bring it out, put it on the ground, call in a harriette and the clothes start cumming off. Oh the power of RA. You're gonna miss that next year aren't you

Chips?

For some reason there was a beer poured for the walking hare but because Precum didn't need one (a hare that is) I think she should have gotten to drink the second hare beer herself but sadly our washed up RA offered it to any walker. Maybe there should be ruling about hare punishments like a requirement to at least touch flour on the trail.

As I recall the other punishments were all Paul and sadly still he remains unnamed. I understand Wee Little Bladder is back in the country and is a hare next week for the big 900th run celebrations so here's hoping for you Paul. You may just get that name in Canada after all.

Thanks Precum for a well set run- in my mind you are one of the best hares we have in Red Deer so keep up the good job. Keep haring alone because we don't want anyone screw with you skills. We need to protect them :)

Is there an award for the longest scribe because if there is I couldn't keep writing :) I got lots of material left. Maybe I should volunteer to scribe next week too. 900th run, 69 hashers registered. That should provide lots of material and I could continue writing about Paul until we name him then he is yesterday's news like the rest of us.

See folks it's not really that difficult to scribe and in a twisted sort of way it can be fun and influential.
