Big crowd for tonight's run. Not sure if they are here to see me or if it is because it is Captain Pissup's and Blowin Ho's run. Circle up was in the perfect spot, mere steps from the prelube. The evening was warm and the run was awesome. And tonight we had a long overdue naming: it is an honor to introduce Wet Spot. Funny, how reality can creep into your fantasy world. Chips was on as usual handing out much needed punishments.

Now I need to address a serious issue that has been bothering the runners. Apparently nothing ever happens on the walk. Even our RA and wise RA have faked injury to investigate. We're not going to be bad in the hallway when the principal is watching, what were you thinking? Well, today I am going to reveal what really happens in the walking Hash.

The walking Hash is a secret society. We all have tattoos on our private parts to identify our membership. Sometimes we even hide in the bush and compare the size of our tattoos. My favorite is the one that looks like our RA. By the way, Wee Little Bladder has the biggest tattoo so far, it's near his scar.

We always know where the Hash Hold is. We are a group of very intelligent individuals with mega big huge IQ's. Like, "oh my" big IQ's. We do the math and our walk is always shorter than it needs to be. If need be, we can always count on Premie or Sir Nookie to lead the way. As sure as I am going to be punished for revealing our secret society, Premie and Nookie are always in need of beer money and easily bribed.

The multiple Hash Hold. Ya, sometimes we have our own Hash Hold. There is always a pub or a good hiding spot to down a quality beer. Our snacks are of the high end quality, caviar and crackers, lobster, and sometimes Ritz Crackers and Spam. We take our Hash Holds seriously, part of our mantra. DQ works well in a pinch but I will say, we have yet stopped for a movie but with the runs getting longer, it is only a matter of time.

The classic Double Tap: Perfected by legendary Wet Denim. This is a technique of setting more trail after the runners are on their way. We count on a longer run so we can fit in our extra Hash Hold. The longer the run the more tired the runner the more the runner doesn't realize the trail is longer. And you all wonder why Boner's runs are so long. We walkers have had a lot of good laughs over this one.

The warm blanket and puppy stop. Hey, it's cold in the winter, Risk frost bite on a walk, wrong. Often we have predetermined locations where we stop for a warm blanket and a puppy to cuddle. Along with this we would of course have a quality brandy and a Cuban cigar to round off the stop. If this doesn't work out, public transportation is always there. We all have bus passes.

The meditation stop. Quite often we will throw down a blanket in a nice park and just meditate. With the extra time we have after setting more trail, we sometimes like to express our problems and feelings to each other after meditating, you know, talk it out. "Some asshole gave me the bird on the way to the run." "How does that make you feel?" Personally, I have yet to see any evidence that suggests listening leads to sex and am thinking of giving that aspect of it up for good.

I would like to apologize for our behavior but this is our version of Club Med. I know, everyone wants to be a walker now and that's okay. Just be aware, the tattoo will hurt. We do it ourselves.
