RE: Recent beta test of CS

Dear Doggy,

Please find the following report regarding the primary beta test of the CSP

(Clone substitution program) as requested by you clients the walkers of the Red Deer Hash house harriers. Please thank all of those who donated DNA this has made the creation of the clones much easier.

You will be happy to note that we had a great turn out with both runners and R walkers (real). It was a stroke of luck that you were able to hare along with Sir Mobey, is he aware of the program?

Instructions were given by the RA along with a plea for naming. There is a runner who is still nameless hopefully something will come up soon.

A scribe was requested. I volunteered thinking that this would be the easiest way to observe without raising suspicion from the runners. On on was called and the group left on trail after being given warning regarding slippery areas. Unfortunately, flooding was not mentioned I hope you were ok after your swim; your dog paddle was impressive.

We met up with the runners at the first check where the RA thought it was appropriate to bombard us with snowballs. On on was soon called at which point the runners bounded off into the dark.

My congratulations to the extraction/substitution team with their fast work. The C walkers started to perform very well while the real ones were whisked away to a secret location that was warm, dry, and Keats laden waiting for the circle up at the end. The only concern I had with the clones was a small fluid leak from Sir Cums. I was able to activate the homing instinct in the clone thanks again for the pickup. We proceeded along with no further difficulty.

The hash hold was brilliant! Lower light levels made any examination of the clones difficult. The runners seemed unaware of the switch. We then went on in with the substitution being performed again.

At the circle the hares were toasted, you were punished for revealing the hash hold at the beginning of the run. FYI. Whispering is usually quiet! If can hear it at a distance it is too loud.

Polar and Dirty were toasted in the circle by Sir Weeeeeee Little Bladder for bringing Belly Stretcher who is now and forever known as Duke of Hazard due to the treacherous conditions and portages required. G Spot was given her 200th run jacket which looked lovely. Then it got WIERD

Premie also received his 300th run jacket which had been in his closet for a while! Then in some Star Trek quantum singularity time shift which would give Steven Hawkins a head ache he received his 200th run jacket. There was a blinding flash and things came back into focus.

The festivities continued at Murph's I went to the lab to check on the clones.

Your humble scribe,

M Sally. RO. RHAP BC-HIS

With a few more trials we should be ready for the Red Dress Run!!!!
