It was a grey drizzly kind of night

All the hashers gathered

There was but one virgin with a lot of might

The hares told us only what mattered

We were as fast as lightning

Looking for trail

Our sense of direction was frightening

Some walkers and runners were pretty frail

We came upon many X's

And some friends with shots

Thankfully we were blessed not with hexes

In the end we passed through some plots

With not one but two hash holes

The hashers became jolly

The beers were hidden from the patrols

The punishments made us melancholy
